to love her well.

Part 2

Caleb Oladejo
Christian Apologist

Christian marriage is not merely spiritual; it is holistic. A husband is both a partner in prayer and a companion in biology. Knowledge strengthens unity. And just as Christ knows His bride intimately, a godly husband seeks to understand the unique details of the woman beside him.

PART 2

UNDERSTANDING HER BODY – A HOLY RESPONSIBILITY, NOT A CARNAL CURIOSITY

For years, many Christian young men were taught to stay far away from anything that resembled curiosity about the female body. The intention was noble: protect purity. But the unintended consequence was a generation of men who entered marriage emotionally sincere but biologically unprepared.

What was considered “protective silence” ended up becoming harmful ignorance.

In the real world of marriage, a husband meets not only his wife’s smile and virtue—he meets her cycles, energy shifts, mood fluctuations, biological rhythms, and monthly patterns. Without knowledge, these natural changes can feel confusing or even overwhelming.

But marriage was never meant to be navigated with guesswork. God designed the woman’s body with understandable rhythms: the menstrual cycle, ovulation, the fertile window, PMS, hormonal highs and lows, emotional sensitivities, and moments where she needs rest, support, or quiet. These are not mysteries reserved for doctors—they are tools God expects husbands to understand.

A man is not lustful for learning these things. He is responsible and if you’re still single and learning about this now, it means you have a better chance to prepare yourself to lead your wife in all areas.

Just as a shepherd learns the needs of the sheep... Just as Christ knows the hearts of His people... A husband is meant to understand the body and emotions of the woman God has entrusted to him.

A woman feels profoundly seen when her husband: - anticipates the days she is likely to feel drained - offers comfort when she is in pain - recognizes that her tears are sometimes hormonal, not personal - understands why her energy peaks around ovulation - provides extra support during PMS - helps her track her cycle when trying to conceive - adjusts his expectations during her more difficult days - stands with her when stress affects her cycle length. Many men who lack understanding of these things often limit their love to only gifts and money, forgetting that the very design of a woman makes her capable of sensing genuine love - one one to show her that is to understand her body.

to love her well.

PART 2

This is not fleshly. It is a ministry.

Christian marriage is not merely spiritual; it is holistic. A husband is both a partner in prayer and a companion in biology. Knowledge strengthens unity. And just as Christ knows His bride intimately —

“The very hairs of your head are all numbered.” — Matthew 10:30 (KJV)

a godly husband seeks to understand the unique details of the woman beside him.

This knowledge does not ignite lust. It ignites compassion. It deepens tenderness. It builds trust. It creates a safer, healthier, more loving marriage. Remember I shared with you how God helped me understand these things in a revelation, the result in me was a kind of godly compassion for the female gender - you can imagine how that will help me love the woman I will marry better. It created in me a deep sense of compassion and care for the female, knowing the delicacy of their creation.
